
Part One of The Home Trilogy
COME BACK HOME
WHEN EVERYTHING IS LOST,
WHERE ARE YOU FOUND?
KRYSTAL GREEN

An explosion that changed everything...

20th June 1987

Hello,

I won't be calling you 'diary' like most people do, maybe I'll name you. I can't think of a proper name right now so we'll figure that out later. It feels so surreal, me journaling.

Now, where do I start? Do I tell you everything about myself or do I continue from today assuming that you know everything about me? Journaling is funny, it would've been easy if I was tracking my life since day one. It would've perfectly captured everything but now how do I fit all my life in a few pages? Everything I have ever felt. It's impossible but here I am, writing even when it doesn't make any sense to me because she told me that writing helps. She didn't even tell me it helps with what, just that it helps. What am I supposed to do with that? Wait... you don't even know who 'she' is, right? This is annoying. I'll recap my life really quick.

You know how when a baby is born, people are especially overjoyed? Well, my birth was the opposite of that for everyone involved. My mother wasn't that 'motherly', I guess I should be grateful she tolerated me. You might be thinking if my mother was this cruel, then why didn't my father do anything for me? Well, I'll be sure to ask him that if I ever meet him in this life. And I'll be honest, I won't badmouth my mother. It's not like she was the evil-stepmother type of cruel. She was just indifferent to me.

©2026 Krystal Green. All rights reserved. Sample excerpt provided for personal reading only.

It's okay, diary. I don't care. Atleast, she didn't bother me. I have heard many mothers can be too cruel. Mine was good in that sense. Also, I don't think I can blame her completely. After all it's not good to talk ill of the dead, right? It wasn't an accident or something. I know they didn't tell me since I was 9 at that time ("too young to understand all this") but I knew she killed herself. I guess it was too much on her, trying to take care of me.

I didn't think it would be this hard to write all this. It's not like I care anymore about any of this. Can't be upset for something that wasn't yours in the first place, right?

Anyways, then I lived in an orphanage for a while. It was nice, people were nice, atleast more than they were required to be to parentless children. Many people came looking to adopt but no one ever really chose me for around four years. No one wanted that kid whose mother had killed herself. I think they wanted a child with a clean slate. Can't really blame them, I would've chosen some trauma-less child as well. After four years, the Tavleys adopted me. They were good to me, sometimes it looked like they really cared. Shocking, right? It was, for me. Anyways, that was short-lived. I was so reckless. I managed to get myself kidnapped and by the time I got free, my town Totin was no more. Some kind of explosion took everyone's lives, including the people who adopted me. Somehow, I made it out alive from all that and currently I can say I'm atleast relatively free from all the human bounds.

Wow, I covered everything in those few paragraphs. I guess, it could've been shorter. Oh yeah, she here is Christine Tavley. She is like an older sister or that's what I assume, I don't know what we are. She's been nagging me for months to write because it helps. I didn't even ask her what or how or why, I just avoided her but she can be so stubborn. Maybe she is right, maybe not, who knows. She has been through a lot but I don't know if it would be right for me to share her story...

©2026 Krystal Green. All rights reserved. Sample excerpt provided for personal reading only.

"And if I get a second life, I would like to come back home..."

The story is only just beginning. Discover the secrets, the mysteries, and the truths waiting to be uncovered in the complete novel.

Come Back Home

By Krystal Green

Book One of The Home Trilogy

Available at krystal-green.github.io/comebackhome/

©2026 Krystal Green. All rights reserved. Sample excerpt provided for personal reading only.